Common Questions About Chase Business Cards

As potential users explore the Chase card business offerings, several common questions arise. Addressing these concerns can help clarify the benefits and functionality of these cards.

Q: What is the difference between Chase business cards and personal cards?

A: Chase business cards are specifically designed for business expenses, offering features that cater to business owners, such as expense tracking, employee card options, and business-specific rewards. Personal cards are intended for individual use and may not have the same business-oriented benefits.

Q: Can I apply for a Chase business card without a registered business?

A: While having a registered business is typically required, sole proprietors can apply using their Social Security number. However, having a formal business entity is recommended for better benefits and credibility.

Q: How does the Chase Ultimate Rewards program work?

A: The Ultimate Rewards program allows cardholders to earn points for every dollar spent, which can be redeemed for travel, cashback, gift cards, and more. Points can also be transferred to various travel partners for increased value.

Q: Are there annual fees for Chase business cards?

A: Some Chase business cards have no annual fees, while others, particularly those with richer rewards, may charge an annual fee. It is essential to assess the benefits against the fee to determine if it is worthwhile.

Q: What should I do if my Chase business card is lost or stolen?

A: Immediately report the lost or stolen card through Chase's customer service to prevent unauthorized transactions. They will assist in blocking the card and issuing a replacement.

Q: Can I manage multiple employee cards under one account?

A: Yes, business owners can manage multiple employee cards under a single account, enabling them to oversee spending and earn rewards on all purchases made by employees.

Q: What are the credit score requirements for a Chase business card?

A: While specific requirements may vary by card, generally, a good credit score (usually above 700) is preferred for approval for Chase business cards.

Q: How can I redeem my Chase Ultimate Rewards points?

A: Points can be redeemed through the Chase Ultimate Rewards portal for travel, merchandise, gift cards, or cashback. Additionally, points can be transferred to travel partners for potentially greater value.

Q: Is there a way to earn bonus points with Chase business cards?

A: Yes, Chase often has promotions and bonus point opportunities for spending in specific categories or during promotional periods. Regularly checking for these offers can enhance your rewards.

Q: What types of expenses can I put on my Chase business card?

A: Virtually any business-related expense can be charged to a Chase business card, including office supplies, travel expenses, utilities, and advertising costs. However, personal expenses should be kept separate to maintain clear financial records.
