Prominent American Authors of the 1850s

The 1850s featured several notable american authors who contributed significantly to the development of American literature. These writers gained recognition for their distinct voices and thematic preoccupations, often reflecting the social and political tensions of the era.

Nathaniel Hawthorne

Nathaniel Hawthorne was one of the most influential american authors 1850s, known for his dark romanticism and exploration of human nature's complexities. His works often delved into themes of sin, guilt, and morality, exemplified by novels like The Scarlet Letter, which, although published earlier, continued to impact his 1850s writings and reputation.

Herman Melville

Herman Melville emerged as a key figure during this decade, with his writing marked by deep philosophical inquiry and narrative innovation. His masterpiece Moby-Dick was published in 1851, reflecting the era's fascination with the struggle between man and nature, as well as existential questions.

Walt Whitman

Walt Whitman revolutionized American poetry in the 1850s with his groundbreaking collection Leaves of Grass. His free verse style and celebration of democracy, nature, and the individual spirit exemplify the burgeoning American literary identity of the time.

Harriet Beecher Stowe

Harriet Beecher Stowe became a prominent voice among american authors 1850s with her powerful anti-slavery novel, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Published in 1852, the novel had a profound impact on public opinion regarding slavery and contributed to the intensification of sectional tensions leading up to the Civil War.

Other Notable Authors

- Ralph Waldo Emerson – Philosopher and essayist promoting transcendentalism.
- Henry James Sr. – Early advocate of philosophical idealism and religious thought.
- Emily Dickinson – Though less recognized during her lifetime, her poetry began developing in this period.

Literary Movements Influencing the 1850s

The 1850s were shaped by several literary movements that influenced american authors 1850s, providing frameworks for thematic and stylistic experimentation.

Romanticism and Dark Romanticism

Romanticism remained dominant in the 1850s, emphasizing emotion, individualism, and nature. Dark Romanticism, a subgenre exemplified by Hawthorne and Melville, focused on the darker aspects of human experience, including sin and psychological turmoil.

Transcendentalism

Transcendentalism, led by figures like Ralph Waldo Emerson and Henry David Thoreau, emphasized intuition, spirituality, and the inherent goodness of people and nature. This movement heavily influenced the philosophical underpinnings of many american authors 1850s.

Realism (Emerging)

Although not fully developed until later decades, realism began to emerge in the 1850s as writers started depicting everyday life and social realities with increased fidelity, moving away from purely romanticized narratives.

Major Works Published in the 1850s

The decade witnessed the publication of several landmark works by American authors in the 1850s, which remain central to the American literary canon.

1. Moby-Dick (1851) by Herman Melville – A complex narrative exploring obsession, fate, and the human condition.
2. Uncle Tom's Cabin (1852) by Harriet Beecher Stowe – A novel that galvanized anti-slavery sentiment and influenced political discourse.
3. Leaves of Grass (First edition, 1855) by Walt Whitman – A poetry collection celebrating democracy and individuality in a new American voice.
4. The House of the Seven Gables (1851) by Nathaniel Hawthorne – A novel continuing his exploration of ancestral guilt and moral complexity.

Social and Historical Context Impacting Literature

The social and political environment of the 1850s deeply influenced American authors in the 1850s, shaping the themes and urgency of their works.

Slavery and Abolitionism

The intensifying debate over slavery profoundly affected the literature of the decade. Writers like Harriet Beecher Stowe used fiction to expose the moral and social evils of slavery, contributing to the abolitionist movement.

Westward Expansion and Manifest Destiny

The rapid expansion of the United States westward inspired themes of exploration, individualism, and the confrontation between civilization and wilderness in literature.

Industrialization and Urbanization

Growing industrialization and urban growth brought new social challenges and transformations, which some authors began to address through evolving literary forms and social critique.

Legacy of American Authors from the 1850s

The influence of American authors 1850s extends well beyond their own era, laying the groundwork for subsequent literary developments and shaping American cultural identity.

Shaping American Literary Identity

By exploring uniquely American themes and experimenting with new literary forms, these authors contributed to the emergence of a distinctly American literature separate from European traditions.

Influence on Later Writers

The innovations and themes introduced by 1850s authors inspired later generations of writers, including the rise of literary realism and modernism in the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

Cultural and Historical Impact

The works of the 1850s continue to be studied for their insight into American history, society, and values during a critical period leading up to the Civil War and beyond.

Additional Resources

1. Moby-Dick by Herman Melville

Published in 1851, "Moby-Dick" is a seminal work of American literature that explores themes of obsession, revenge, and the human condition. The novel follows Captain Ahab's relentless pursuit of the white whale, Moby Dick, across the seas. Melville's rich symbolism and complex narrative style make this a profound and enduring classic.

2. The Scarlet Letter by Nathaniel Hawthorne

Released in 1850, this novel is set in Puritan New England and tells the story of Hester Prynne, who is publicly shamed for bearing an illegitimate child. Hawthorne delves into themes of sin, guilt, and redemption, offering a critical look at societal norms and morality. The scarlet letter "A" that Hester must wear becomes a powerful symbol throughout the story.

3. Leaves of Grass by Walt Whitman

First published in 1855, "Leaves of Grass" is a groundbreaking collection of poetry that celebrates nature, individuality, and democracy. Whitman's free verse style broke away from traditional poetic forms, influencing generations of poets. The work embodies the spirit of American transcendentalism and the optimism of the mid-19th century.

4. Uncle Tom's Cabin by Harriet Beecher Stowe

This 1852 novel had a profound impact on attitudes toward slavery in the United States. Stowe's vivid portrayal of the harsh realities faced by enslaved people helped galvanize the abolitionist movement. The book combines emotional storytelling with a strong moral message, making it one of the most influential works of its time.

5. Ten Nights in a Bar-Room and What I Saw There by Timothy Shay Arthur

Published in 1854, this temperance novel highlights the destructive effects of alcohol on individuals and families. Arthur uses a fictional tavern setting to depict the social problems caused by drinking, advocating for moral reform. The book was widely read and contributed to the temperance movement in America.

6. Ben-Hur: A Tale of the Christ by Lew Wallace

Although published slightly later in 1880, Wallace began writing in the mid-19th century, and his work reflects the era's religious and cultural concerns. "Ben-Hur" is an epic tale of revenge, redemption, and faith set during the time of Christ. It became one of the best-selling American novels of the 19th century.

7. The House of the Seven Gables by Nathaniel Hawthorne

This 1851 novel combines Gothic elements with a critique of Puritanism through the story of a cursed New England family. Hawthorne explores themes of guilt, retribution, and atonement while weaving a haunting tale of ancestral sin and its consequences. The atmospheric setting adds to the novel's enduring appeal.

8. Agnes Grey by Anne Brontë (American edition in the 1850s)

While Anne Brontë was British, "Agnes Grey" gained significant popularity in America during the 1850s and influenced American readers and writers. The novel is a semi-autobiographical account of a governess's struggles, highlighting social class and gender issues. Its realistic portrayal of Victorian life resonated with an American audience grappling with similar themes.

9. The Blithedale Romance by Nathaniel Hawthorne

Published in 1852, this novel is inspired by Hawthorne's experiences at the Brook Farm transcendentalist community. It examines idealism, utopianism, and human flaws through a complex narrative and richly drawn characters. The story critiques the limitations of social experiments and explores the tension between individual desires and communal goals.

american authors 1850s: A History of American Magazines, Volume II: 1850-1865 Frank Luther Mott, 1938 The first volume of this work, covering the period from 1741-1850, was issued in 1931 by another publisher, and is reissued now without change, under our imprint. The second volume covers the period from 1850 to 1865; the third volume, the period from 1865 to 1885. For each chronological period, Mr. Mott has provided a running history which notes the occurrence of the chief general magazines and the developments in the field of class periodicals, as well as publishing conditions during that period, the development of circulations, advertising, payments to contributors, reader attitudes, changing formats, styles and processes of illustration, and the like. Then in a supplement to that running history, he offers historical sketches of the chief magazines which flourished in the period. These sketches extend far beyond the chronological limitations of the period. The second and third volumes present, altogether, separate sketches of seventy-six magazines, including The North American Review, The Youth's Companion, The Liberator, The Independent, Harper's Monthly, Leslie's Weekly, Harper's Weekly, The Atlantic Monthly, St. Nicholas, and Puck. The whole is an unusual mirror of American civilization.

american authors 1850s: African American Literature in Transition, 1850-1865: Volume 4, 1850-1865 Teresa Zackodnik, 2021-05-13 The period of 1850-1865 consisted of violent struggle and crisis as the United States underwent the prodigious transition from slaveholding to ostensibly 'free' nation. This volume reframes mid-century African American literature and challenges our current understandings of both African American and American literature. It presents a fluid tradition that includes history, science, politics, economics, space and movement, the visual, and the sonic. Black writing was highly conscious of transnational and international politics, textual circulation, and revolutionary imaginaries. Chapters explore how Black literature was being produced and circulated; how and why it marked its relation to other literary and expressive traditions; what geopolitical imaginaries it facilitated through representation; and what technologies, including print, enabled African Americans to pursue such a complex and ongoing aesthetic and political project.

american authors 1850s: The Rise of New Media 1750-1850 Julia Straub, 2017-05-22 This monograph explores transatlantic literary culture by tracing the proliferation of 'new media,' such as the anthology, the literary history and the magazine, in the period between 1750 and 1850. The fast-paced media landscape out of which these publishing genres developed produced the need of a 'memory of literature' and a concomitant rhetoric of remembering strikingly similar to what today is called a cultural memory debate. Thus, rather than depicting the emergence of an American national literature, The Rise of New Media (1750-1850) combines impulses from media history, the history of print, the sociology of literature and canon theory to uncover nascent forms and genres of literary self-reflectivity and early stirrings of a canon debate in the Atlantic World.

american authors 1850s: Asian American Literature in Transition, 1850-1930: Volume 1 Josephine Lee, Julia H. Lee, 2021-06-17 The years between 1850 and 1930 witnessed the first large-scale migration of peoples from East Asia and South Asia to North America and the emergence of the US as an imperial power in the Pacific. This period also produced the first instances of Asian North American writing, theater, and film. This exciting collection examines how the many literary and cultural works from this period approached questions of migration, exclusion, and identity. Covering an extensive ranges of topics including anticolonialist writing, the erotics of queer modernist poetry, interracial desire, and the racial gaze in silent film, the book shows the diverse and multi-ethnic nature of literary and cultural production at a crucial period in modern formations of race as well as literary and cultural aesthetics.

W. Barksdale Maynard overturns the long-accepted notions that the chief theme of early 19th-century American architecture was a patriotic desire to escape from European influence and that competing styles chiefly reflected the American struggle for cultural uniqueness. Instead, deep and consistent aesthetic ties, especially with England, shaped American architecture and house designs. Maynard shows that the Greek Revival in particular was an international phenomenon, with American achievements inspired by British example and with taste taking precedence over patriotism.
