Overview of the Bastien Piano Method for Adults

The Bastien piano method for adults is a systematic piano instructional series developed to facilitate adult beginners in acquiring foundational piano skills efficiently. Unlike beginner methods aimed at children, this curriculum acknowledges adult learning styles and paces, offering a tailored approach that respects adult cognitive and motor skill capabilities. The series typically includes a comprehensive lesson book, theory book, and supplemental materials such as performance pieces and sight-reading exercises. Its content progresses logically from basic concepts like note reading and rhythm to more advanced techniques like scales and chord progressions.

History and Development

The Bastien method was originally created by James and Jane Bastien and has been widely adopted in music education for several decades. The adult series emerged as an adaptation of the children's curriculum, revised to address the specific challenges and goals of adult learners. The materials have been updated periodically to incorporate contemporary teaching methodologies and musical selections that appeal to an older demographic.

Target Audience

This method is designed primarily for adult beginners who may not have prior musical training. It suits individuals seeking a structured, easy-to-follow course that can be used either independently or with the guidance of a piano teacher. The Bastien piano for adults review finds that it also works well for adults returning to piano after a long hiatus, offering a refresher on fundamental skills.

Instructional Design and Curriculum Structure

The instructional design of the Bastien piano for adults emphasizes gradual skill acquisition through clear, concise lessons. The curriculum is divided into progressive units that build upon previously learned material, promoting steady advancement without overwhelming the learner.

Lesson Book Content

The lesson books feature a blend of theoretical instruction, practical exercises, and musical pieces. Each lesson introduces new concepts such as note identification, rhythm patterns, hand positioning, and simple melodies. The exercises reinforce these concepts through repetition and variation, ensuring comprehension and muscle memory development.

Theory and Technique Integration

The method integrates music theory alongside practical playing techniques, encouraging learners to understand the structure of music as they develop technical proficiency. This dual focus supports a more comprehensive musical education, facilitating better sight-reading and improvisation skills over time.

Supplementary Materials

Additional resources, including sight-reading books, performance collections, and theory workbooks, complement the main lesson books. These materials provide varied practice opportunities, helping learners apply skills in diverse musical contexts and enhance overall musicianship.

Accessible Language and Explanations

The instructional text uses straightforward language and avoids overly technical jargon, making it easier for adult beginners to grasp new concepts without frustration. This accessibility fosters confidence and motivation.

Variety of Musical Styles

Potential Drawbacks and Considerations

Limited Advanced Content

The series primarily targets beginner to early intermediate levels, which may require learners to transition to other resources once they reach a certain proficiency. Adults seeking comprehensive long-term study might need additional materials beyond Bastien.

Repetitive Exercises

Some users may find the exercise format somewhat repetitive, potentially affecting motivation over time. Incorporating supplementary pieces or alternative practice methods can mitigate this concern.

Less Emphasis on Improvisation

Faber Adult Piano Adventures

The Faber method incorporates contemporary songs and emphasizes creativity alongside technical skills, appealing to adults who want a more modern learning experience. It also stresses ear training and improvisation more than Bastien.

Self-Study vs. Teacher-Led Approaches

While Bastien is effective for self-study, some other methods provide more structured teacher-led guidance and multimedia supplements, which can enhance learning outcomes for certain adults.

- Bastien: Structured, traditional, beginner-focused

- Alfred: Broader repertoire, balanced theory and technique
- Faber: Modern songs, creativity, improvisation emphasis
