counseling diverse populations: Counseling Diverse Populations Donald R. Atkinson, Gail Hackett, 1998 The purpose of this second edition of Counseling Diverse Populations is the same as the first edition, to call to the attention of mental healthy practitioners the unique experiences and needs of four groups within the American society that, along with ethnic and selected other groups, share the common experience of oppression. These four groups are people with disabilities, older people, women, and gay people. Each of these four groups has a common physical and/or behavioral characteristic that identifies individuals as members of the group and that has singled them out for differential and inferior treatment. Each of these groups has in the past experienced (and continues to experience) discrimination as a result of their physical and/or behavioral uniqueness. Discrimination for all four groups has ranged from negative stereotypes to physical violence. It is our thesis that mental health practitioners need to be more aware of the unique experiences of these groups in order to effectively intervene on their behalf.

counseling diverse populations: Intersections of Multiple Identities Miguel E. Gallardo, Brian

W. McNeill, 2011-02-11 Over the past two decades, there has been an increase in the need to prepare and train mental health personnel in working with diverse populations. In order to fully understand individuals from different cultures and ethnic backgrounds, practitioners need to begin to examine, conceptualize, and treat individuals according to the multiple ways in which they identify themselves. The purpose of this casebook is to bridge the gap between the current practice of counseling with the newest theories and research on working with diverse clientele. Each chapter is written by leading experts in the field of multicultural counseling and includes a case presentation with a detailed analysis of each session, a discussion of their theoretical orientation and how they have modified it to provide more culturally appropriate treatment, and an explanation of how their own dimensions of diversity and worldviews enhance or potentially impede treatment. Utilizing current research and personal experiences, 20 authors convey the needs, experiences, and characteristics of populations commonly encountered by counselors as well as those commonly discriminated against and misunderstood. New chapters focus specifically on Arab Americans, multiracial persons, incarcerated individuals, those in the sexual minority, and, more broadly, on men and women's issues. This text provides a resource through which practitioners can expand their knowledge and awareness of the values and conduct of diverse populations and of themselves. Cooper, 2011-09-23 This monograph is focused on educating faculty and administrators about the developmental issues faced by students from different racial, ethnic, or other social groupings as they attempt to define themselves during the college years and the ways this information can enhance campus classrooms, programs, and policies. Although there is a growing body of work on how various racial, ethnic, gender and other social groups develop their identity, there has been limited synthesis or application of this literature to the practice of professionals in higher education. The authors have higher education administrative backgrounds, so their recommendations are grounded in experience, and each also has a solid record of scholarship in identity development. The combined scholarly and administrative experience of the three authors enhances the contribution of this book.
