hitler rhom speech english: Charisma and Factionalism in the Nazi Party Joseph Nyomarkay, 1967-07-17 Charisma and Factionalism in the Nazi Party was first published in 1967. Minnesota Archive Editions uses digital technology to make long-unavailable books once again accessible, and are published unaltered from the original University of Minnesota Press editions. Few aspects of the history of the German Nazi party have had as little scholarly attention as has the nature or pattern of the intraparty factionalism. References to conflicts within the party may be found in most accounts dealing with the Nazi movement, but this book presents the first systematic study of those conflicts and their significance to an understanding of Nazism. Professor Nyomarkay bases his study on extensive research in which he had access to original source materials, including diaries and memoirs of party leaders and documents from Nazi trials and party archives. His study is concerned with the issues, attitudes, motivations, and actions of the various factions. His conclusions suggest new interpretations of such turning points in the history of Nazism as the Hanover and Bamberg conferences of 1925 and 1926, respectively, the Strasser crisis of 1930, and the stormtrooper purge of 1934. The author examines the role of Hitler's charisma in the party and shows that this trait elevated Hitler above factional strife, making him the object rather than the subject of rivalries. The discussion of charisma points up the difference between the Nazi factionalism and that which has occurred in other totalitarian movements, such as communism, where authority rests on ideology rather than on charisma. Through his study Professor Nyomarkay offers a new theory of the relationship between factional conflict and legitimacy of power, presenting a hypothesis of possible typologies of factional behavior based on the nature and degree of group cohesion. The book is important for students of political science and history and particularly for those interested in totalitarian movements and comparative political parties.

hitler rhom speech english: Our Hitler Joseph Goebbels, Frances Dupont, 2014-09-18 Every year on April 20th, from 1933 to 1945-only missing one year, 1934-National Socialist Germany's Minister of Information Joseph Goebbels gave a speech on the occasion of Adolf Hitler's birthday. These speeches, all published in the newspaper the Völkischer Beobachter, and all but the first and last broadcast on German radio, were originally designed to pay homage to Hitler on a personal level on his birthday. However, it quickly became a way for Goebbels to philosophically interpret the events of the previous year in the light of German loyalty to the Führer. The first few years' speeches-taken up with the peaceful reconstruction of Germany and the acquisition of the Rhineland, Austria and the Sudetenland-were distinctly different from those of the war years, as the reader will see. Goebbels dealt with the initial German victories-and later, defeats-honestly and objectively in these speeches, and for large numbers of Germans, they quickly became an annual barometer of how the country's top leadership viewed the direction of the war. These speeches, here translated into English, annotated and presented as one volume for the first time, provide a fascinating insight into the psychology of the Hitler phenomenon, as seen through the eyes of the Third Reich's most gifted propagandist.
