still me christopher reeve summary: Principles and Practices of Case Management in Rehabilitation Counseling E. Davis Martin, 2007 This second edition is a major revision and update of Rehabilitation and Disability: Psychosocial Case Studies. The role and function of the rehabilitation counselor is described relative to the principles and practices of case management in the vocational rehabilitation process. The first chapter describes landmark legislation that has ensured the human and civil rights of persons with disabilities. The author relates changes to those of the consumerism movement, as persons with disabilities move from passive recipients of services to active participants capable of steering their own future, choosing their jobs and environments. Assessment as a best practice has expanded from being agency-oriented to being person-oriented. In addition to the use of best practices, the author advocates the use of best values to serve as the decision-making foundation for the application of best practices. Values can be the standards that guide the entire rehabilitation service delivery process, including the formulation of objectives, the search for alternatives, and the choices among them. The goal is for the client to realize the American Dream. The first two parts of the text provide a person-based philosophy and a substantial knowledge base in case management, and the thirteen case studies in the third part allow the reader to investigate the use of best practices and best values in case management. An outstanding group of contributors was selected to author various chapters. Their collective achievements have included agency-executive leadership, university professorships and consultative activities at the state, national, and international levels. Each contributor, as well, has made significant scholarly contributions to the rehabilitation literature. While the text was developed primarily for use in graduate rehabilitation counseling programs, it has great utility for related academic programs in allied health, psychology, social sciences, and special education. The text, also, has practical value for in-service and short term training anywhere that the vocational rehabilitation process can be facilitated from a client-centered perspective.

still me christopher reeve summary: Ten Worlds Ash ElDifrawi, Alex Lickerman, 2018-10-02 Fresh on the heels of his phenomenally-received book, The Undefeated Mind, Dr. Lickerman and co-author Dr. ElDifrawi offer a whole new perspective on understanding and achieving happiness. In this highly engaging and eminently practical book-told in the form of a Platonic dialogue recounting real-life patient experiences- Drs. Lickerman and ElDifrawi assert that the reason genuine, longlasting happiness is so difficult to achieve and maintain is that we're profoundly confused not only about how to go about it, but also about what happiness is. In identifying nine basic erroneous views we all have about what we need to be happy-views they term the core delusions-Lickerman and ElDifrawi show us that our happiness depends not on our external possessions or even on our experiences but rather on the beliefs we have that shape our most fundamental thinking. These beliefs, they argue, create ten internal life-conditions, or worlds, through which we continuously cycle and that determine how happy we're able to be. Drawing on the latest scientific research as well as Buddhist philosophy, Lickerman and ElDifrawi argue that once we learn to embrace a correct understanding of happiness, we can free ourselves from the suffering the core delusions cause us and enjoy the kind of happiness we all want, the kind found in the highest of the Ten Worlds, the world of Enlightenment.

still me christopher reeve summary: Continuator Leonard J. Lehrman, 2024-12-18
Historically, the term cosmopolitan has often been combined with the adjective rootless, to describe members of the Jewish diaspora with a sense of alienation from mainstream culture. The author of this autobiography, the creator of music to words in eleven languages, and translations from each of them into his native English, feels anything but rootless, however, in his devotion to learning from and extending tradition. In this memoir, he describes the influences of family, mentors, and colleagues that have shaped his life and work, including 100 translations/adaptations, 12 operas, 7 musicals, and 246 other vocal & instrumental works (heard on 6 continents) based on words by Blake, Rossetti, Shelley, Dickinson, Malamud, Chekhov, Heine, Brecht, Nash, Abel Meeropol, Langston Hughes, Norman Rosten, Karl Shapiro, Mihai Eminescu, Joel Shatzky, and dozens of other writers (especially women and Australians) in English, French, German, Greek, Hebrew, Ladino, Romanian, Russian, Spanish, Xhosa and Yiddish. He also recounts his learning experiences at Harvard, Cornell, Indiana; with the Guarneri Quartet, Nadia Boulanger, Erik Werba, Boris Goldovsky; as Metropolitan Opera Assistant Chorus Master; and in several German-speaking theaters in Europe, culminating in Berlin, where he was the first Jew to conduct Fiddler on the Roof in that city, and founded the Jüdischer Musiktheaterverein Berlin. At the invitation of Wolfgang Wagner, he and his wife Helene performed the first Yiddish song recital in Bayreuth during the Wagner Festival. Adapting/completing unfinished works by Marc Blitzstein, including Idiots First (winner of the first Off-Broadway Opera Award for most important event of the season) and Sacco and Vanzetti (nominated for a Pulitzer Prize), he worked with Leonard Bernstein, who called him Marc's dybbuk" and composers Lazar Weiner, Paul Hindemith, Earl Kim, Harold Blumenfeld, Virgil Thomson, David Diamond, Joel Mandelbaum, Tom Lehrer, Lou (& Peter) Berryman, Pete Seeger, Sheldon Harnick, Ned Rorem, Stephen Sondheim, John Eaton, Donald Erb, Robert M. Palmer and especially Elie Siegmeister, who called him my Continuator - hence the title of this book. Finally, the autobiography chronicles adventures on four continents, including over 700 performances with soprano Helene Williams, celebrating Emma Goldman, Rosa Luxemburg, Anne Frank, and five centuries of music, theatre, and naturism, in close to 5,000 YouTube videos with over 1,000,000 views, to date. About the Author A member of the Green Party, Community Church of Boston, and the ACLU, Leonard J. still me christopher reeve summary: The Nature of Human Persons Jason T. Eberl, 2020-06-25 For a human being to exist, does it require an immaterial mind, a physical body, a functioning brain, a soul? Is there a shared nature common to all human beings? What essential qualities might define this nature? These questions are among the most widely discussed topics in the history of philosophy and remain subjects of perennial interest and controversy. The Nature of Human Persons offers a metaphysical investigation of the composition of the human essence. Jason Eberl also considers the criterion of identity for a developing human being—that is, what is required for a human being to continue existing as a person despite undergoing physical and psychological changes over time? Eberl places Thomas Aquinas's account of human nature into direct comparison with several prominent contemporary theories: substance dualism, emergentism, animalism, constitutionalism, four-dimensionalism, and embodied mind theory. These theories inform conclusions regarding when human beings first come into existence (at conception, during gestation, or after birth), how we ought to define death for human beings, and whether (and if so how) human beings may survive death. Ultimately, The Nature of Human Persons argues that the Thomistic account of human nature addresses the matters of human nature and survival more holistically than other theories and offers a cohesive portrait of one's continued existence from conception through life to death and beyond.

still me christopher reeve summary: Stories of Sports Crystal L. Beach, Katie Shepherd Dredger, Katherin Garland, Cathy Leogrande, 2021-03-12 Stories of Sports: Critical Literacy in Media Production, Consumption, and Dissemination discusses how media demonstrates privilege, policing, stereotypes, confirmation bias, and objectification in a world where the role of athletics in Western society speaks to privilege and power. Contributors use a critical media lens to analyze texts, including newspapers, magazines, film, television, social media, and sportscasts to demonstrate to readers the ways in which sports stories reinforce or disrupt patterns of power and the ways that power is enacted. This book questions the role of the sports-industrial complex in our society and argues that, while healthy competition and physical health can come from bodily exertion, corruption can contaminate these benefits with the wielding of influence and the acquisition of cultural and financial capital. Contributors examine how the ways that resources are allocated, the coverage of certain sports and athletes, and how viewers view competitive arenas speak to power and privilege in ways that can affect both athletes and athletic stakeholders, highlighting the importance of critically examining sports media. Scholars of media studies and sports will find this book particularly useful.

still me christopher reeve summary: Treatments Lisa Diedrich, Creative expression inspired by disease has been criticized as a celebration of victimhood, unmediated personal experience, or just simply bad art. Despite debate, however, memoirs written about illness—particularly AIDS or cancer—have proliferated since the late twentieth century and occupy a highly influential place on the cultural landscape today. In Treatments, Lisa Diedrich considers illness narratives, demonstrating that these texts not only recount and interpret symptoms but also describe illness as an event that reflects wider cultural contexts, including race, gender, class, and sexuality. Diedrich begins this theoretically rigorous analysis by offering examples of midcentury memoirs of tuberculosis. She then looks at Susan Sontag's Illness As Metaphor, Audre Lorde's The Cancer Journals, and Eve Kosofsky Sedgwick's "White Glasses," showing how these breast cancer survivors draw on feminist health practices of the 1970s and also anticipate the figure that would appear in the wake of the AIDS crisis in the 1980s—the "politicized patient." She further reveals how narratives written by doctors Abraham Verghese and Rafael Campo about treating people with AIDS can disrupt the doctor-patient hierarchy, and she explores practices of witnessing that emerge in writing by Paul Monette and John Bayley. Through these records of intensely personal yet universal experience, Diedrich demonstrates how language both captures and fails to capture these "scenes of loss" and how illness narratives affect the literary, medical, and cultural contexts from which they arise. Finally, by examining the ways in which the sick speak and are spoken for, she argues for an ethics of failure—the revaluation of loss as creating new possibilities for how we live and die. Lisa Diedrich is assistant professor of women's studies at Stony Brook University.
